

Amphibians are animals that usually live part of their lives in water and part on land. Their body temperature stays the same as the temperature of their surroundings.

